First of all, I do not have any idea what it feels like to be a dad, however, I have been blessed to witness many dads all with different parenting styles. So what defines a dad, what moves a man from father to dad (daddy, papa, pops, dada)? What one thing do most dads have in common whether they are playful dads, serious dads, hard working dads, prayerful dads, etc.? I believe it is that they love their children more than life itself.

My very first example of a dad in my life is my own dad, he was a man of great devotion to his God, his wife and his children. He was an ordinary man who lived and extraordinary life of love and sacrifice. A dad teaches by example to follow, he is their children's first teacher. He disciplines his children because he knows it will make them strong. He prays for them because he knows only with God's help can he give his children everything. Dads have compassion for their children, that way the child learns the Lord's compassion.

A dad is a doer, he walks the talk. He lives and exemplifies what he preaches. A dad provides for his family. A dad spends time with his children, he gives them the gift of himself. He is not afraid to hug and kiss his kids, both boys and girls need daddy to show them affection. And most importantly, no matter what, a dad never gives up on his children. He never gives up hope and is ready to receive his child back with open arms. He can discipline, he can hold accountable, but he must never give up.

Dads in the 21st Century have a greater spiritual role in the life of their children because their children's souls are at greater risk than ever before. So, we ask Our Lord to bless our dads today, to give them strength to run and not grow weary, to fill them with Grace and courage to continue to fight and to keep them strong in the ways of the Lord. Amen.
